GOBLE FAMILY REUNION - 2013

We are making plans for the 2013 Goble Family Reunion. We normally have our reunions during the summer months so families with children can attend. So we're looking at June, July or August.

Since the earliest Gobles started out in Boston, Charlestown and Concord, Massachusetts and Morristown, New Jersey perhaps there would be some interesting researching to be done in the area.

There has been a good response to the suggestion of a Goble History Tour by caravan. If you have an idea or suggestion, please let us know soon.

Our cousin, Brian Valentino of New Jersey, has graciously volunteered to host the reunion in Long Branch, New Jersey, which is in Monmouth County. Research is being done currently to locate an acceptable hotel/motel for our event. Evelyn and Warren Steen will be making a visit this fall to make sure everything we are planning is doable. So, we are looking for comments and suggestions from our members on this special event.

Please fill out the attached questionnaire and return it to: Barbara Volker, 684 W. Stuart Avenue, Fresno, California 93704. Or you can leave your comment on our Facebook page at: <http://www.facebook.com/groups/259543309607/>. We need to know who is interested in attending so we can finalize our plans.

NEW PASTOR GREETES MIDDLEBORO FLOCK

THE REV. WILLIAM D. GOBLE AND MIDDLEBORO
CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Large Congregation Hears Sermon of the Rev. William D. Goble in the Central Baptist Church.

(Special Dispatch to the Boston Herald)

Middleboro, April 2, 1907. The Rev. William D. Goble of Newton began his duties as pastor of the Central Baptist Church today. The edifice was well filled to hear the new pastor deliver his introductory sermon.

The Rev. Mr. Goble is the 14th pastor of the church and is 33 years old. His parents removed from their home in North Carolina in the early 70s to Kansas, where Mr. Goble received his early education, being graduated from Ottawa University, the Baptist state school, in 1904. While at the university he won several prizes in composition and the first prize in the intercollegiate oratorical contest.

In 1904 he entered the Newton Theological Institution and will be graduated in June. For over two years Mr. Goble has supplied the pulpit at the Baptist Church in Hingham.

The Central Baptist Church is one of the most prominent in town, and was built in 1889 to take the piece of the first church, which was destroyed by fire. At the present time the church has a growing membership, and the church committee are looking for some gains in the membership rolls during the pastorate of Mr. Goble.

Yesterday there was a special musical programme rendered by a quartet composed of Miss Ruth Martin, Miss Eldoretta Cushing, George Thomas and Clarence Kendall.

William D. Goble was the father of our own Corban Goble, of our Southern Goble tree.

ALICE BROOKMAN OR MOUSALL

Correcting misinformation is very hard to do. Many previous genealogical studies have concluded, without proof, that Alice, wife of Thomas Goble, was a Mousall. This is not true.

Ralph and Alice Mousall were married in England prior to their emigrating from Norwich, Norfolk, England. They were passengers on the Winthrop Fleet of ships in 1630.

Thomas Goble and Alice Brookman were married in England prior to emigrating to the colonies from West Sussex England in 1633 or early 1634.³ The exact ship has not been determined but it was likely the Abigail, Hopewell or Lion.⁴

The Mousalls adopted two daughters, Mary Gove, who later became the second wife of Thomas Goble, Jr. and Ruth who married Edward Wood. None of the four "daughters" named by Ralph Mousall in his will was born to him and his wife Alice; two of them, Elizabeth Mousall and Mary Mousall, were his daughters-in-law, married to his sons John and Thomas, and the other two, Ruth Wood and Mary Gove, were wards of the Mousall family, taken in by agreement with members of the Wood and Gove families⁵ [TG 9:98, 136]. The Great Migration Begins, Sketches PRESERVED PURITAN

I suspect this is what the incorrect assumptions were based on of a Mousall/Goble connection. These two couples were contemporaries while in the colonies. Below is a copy of the microfilm of the original entry in the parish record.⁶

In Aldingbourne, West Sussex, England on November 05, 1619 Thomas Goble married Alice Brookman.

In examining several pertinent early New England genealogical references, it is seen that many do not state Alice's maiden name, leave it blank, or state that she was "perhaps daughter of Ralph MOUSALL" without citing any source of that supposition. In fact, Dorothy Hand DYMOND after reviewing various family relationships and relative ages in previous works, states, "Thus, Mousall cannot be considered the maiden name of Thomas (1) Goble's wife."⁷

Based on the body of evidence I must agree with Mrs. Dymond and Dr. Quirke. If you have questions please review this study on our website at <http://homepages.rootsweb.ancestry.com/~goble/homepage/thomas/quirke.htm>. Evelyn Goble Steen

COMPUTER WOES

Hello cousins,
This past few weeks has been difficult as my computer died! I have had the information removed from the old hard drive and installed on a new computer, but it has set me back again in the completion of my book and this newsletter. I've worked on a PC for over 30 years and finally got tired of the constant viruses and crashes. I got a MAC this time and I understand from many of you with MACs that you never have these problems, so I'm hoping I won't have this happen to me ever again! Most of my data was salvaged, but I did lose some important work. I am going to swallow

FUNNY GOBLE STORY⁸

FRIENDSHIP FAILS TO SURVIVE PLACING SKUNK IN RUMBLE SEAT

BRIELLE, N.J., March 11 1936 (AP) – A skunk in the rumble seat is apt to part the closest friends.

Consider the tale of Frank Goble and James Britton, who used to be great pals. Goble had a new car of which he was proud, but Britton was a friend and he loaned it to him the other night.

Britton brought the car back and with it a very strong odor. Goble opened the rumble seat. Out jumped an indignant skunk.

The skunk escaped but Goble haled his erstwhile friend into court. Britton had donned new clothes for the arraignment but the court ordered all windows opened. The charge was disorderly conduct.

Britton told the court that in a moment of whimsy he had caught the skunk and imprisoned it in the rumble seat. "I guess I was thoughtless," he said.

Justice Becker assessed Britton $5.50 for court costs and suspended a $5 fine providing Britton would clean the car, especially the rumble seat.
